EDI is an exchange of business documents in a standard electronic format via the internet, between different trading partners. This system enables cost saving, lesser errors, faster processing, and improved partner or customer relationships in your organization. Business users and the IT department are the two main stakeholders in EDI automation.

1. Cost Savings

Using an EDI service, companies can execute workflows that reduce paper expenses, streamline documentation processes, comply with EDI service standards to avoid fines due to SLA violations, delays, and other performance gaps.

2. Speed

EDI allows enterprises to cut processing time remarkably through automation, speeding up business cycles and potentially shortening Order-to-shipment cycles up to 60 percent.

3. Accuracy

EDI avoids common errors that are made when data is entered manually. EDI solutions are designed to automate the cumbersome data entry and eliminate human-caused errors.

4. Efficiency

EDI is proven to be fast and accurate, which is why it's such a popular integration and automation method to enterprises everywhere.

5. Security

Companies can share data securely across many communication protocols and security standards, to ensure compliance with mandates in global business.

EDI Integration for Modern Businesses

EDI integration is so critical to meeting customer demands, improving employee efficiency, and streamlining the delivery of goods and services. The question is how is a business supposed to decide which integration solution is the right fit for its needs? The answer is let the experts at Lockhart Consulting Group, Inc. provide your company with the experts, facts, and data to make informed decisions for your company's EDI integration solutions.

Lockhart Consulting Group can automate your EDI processes that connect, transform, and route EDI and non-EDI documents between internal and business partner applications, without the need for custom code. This enables businesses to reduce operational latency and costly errors and allows companies to start doing business with new trading partners faster.

Lockhart Consulting Group can offer most of everything to meet your EDI needs, from automated EDI integration tools to self-managed EDI integration processes, including automated partner onboarding. Or our integration experts can manage all the EDI and B2B integration processes for you, with the flexibility and scale that you truly need. Regardless of how you move your EDI files.